HIST 5750 American Voices

Catalog

2014-2015

Course Description

This course explores the ways we use primary accounts to make claims of historical truth. Together we will read a variety of documents - some considered foundational to the formation of an American national identity - and interrogate the limits and possibilities they hold for teaching American history. We will intend to develop both our own understanding of how to interpret documents and our ability to help students do the same.
