

THTRE 3460 Period Acting Styles

1-3 hours

Departments/Programs:

Theatre

Participants in Period Acting Styles will prepare and present a full-length play to be rehearsed during the semester and presented as part of the NWU University Theatre season. Starting with a series of vocal and physical exercises, students will explore the script. Students will conduct research on the time period, cultural context and language. Students will also do an in-depth character analysis and collaborate on all aspects of the production process. Period Acting Styles may be repeated for credit.

Prerequisite(s): Junior standing or permission of the instructor.
