Nebraska Wesleyan University

SOC 2530 Population and Environment

Catalog

2015-2016

Course Description

This course examines the demographic and social dynamics of population size, composition, and distribution. It addresses the relationships between population, human health, development and the environment. Strong cross-cultural emphasis. A major focus is the development of a semester research paper contrasting the status of the Millennium Development Goals, Environmental status and Health in an MDC and an LDC.

Course Hours

4 hours

Departments

1. Sociology and Anthropology