Course:

SOC 1110 Introduction to Sociology

4 hours

Majors, Minors & Degrees:

Majors

Business-Sociology (B.S.)
Criminal Justice in Society (B.S.)
History-Social Science Education (B.A., B.S.)
Nursing (Pre-Licensure) (B.S.N.)
Social Work (B.A.)
Social Work (B.S.)
Sociology-Anthropology (B.A., B.S.)

Minors

American Minority Studies
Criminal Justice
Family Studies
Legal Studies
Peace and Justice Studies
Sociology-Anthropology

Departments/Programs:

Sociology and Anthropology

This course is an introduction to using the sociological perspective as a method of social inquiry. Students explore such basic concepts as culture, socialization, social structure, social interaction, and social change. They study and apply the theories and research methodologies used to investigate human social interaction. These concepts are applied to social topics such as race, class, gender, family, crime, population, environment, and others.
(Normally offered each semester.)