Nebraska Wesleyan University

SOC 3250 Thinking SocioLogically: Work

Catalog

2020-2021

Course Description

This course explores work and occupations through a sociological lens, conceptualizing work as a social construction and a structural reality. Students will explore major topics and conceptual frameworks in the Sociology of works such as classical and contemporary theories, occupations, labor unions, work and social inequality, gendered labor markets, work and family, the changing workforce and contemporary issues of work.

Prerequisite(s): SOC 1110 Introduction to Sociology

Course Hours

2 hours

Departments

1. Sociology and Anthropology