RELIG 1230 Introduction to the New Testament

Catalog

2021-2022

Course Description

This course offers an introduction to the collections of materials documenting the origins of Christianity, commonly known as the New Testament. Focus lies in the texts and beyond, including the social, literary, ideological, and theological contexts in which they emerged and which they reflect, and to the various critical methodologies and terms employed in interpreting them. (Normally offered each spring semester.)
