Catalog

2025-2026

Program Description

The mission of the undergraduate social work program at Nebraska Wesleyan University is to prepare students with the knowledge, values, and skills needed to address and prevent the conditions that limit human rights and respect diversity. The undergraduate social work program is committed to fostering critical thinkers who identify as competent generalist practitioners with the goal of promoting social justice while valuing human well-being and scientific inquiry. We prepare our students to use a person-in-environment framework and global perspectives while serving diverse individuals, families, groups, organizations, and communities. Furthermore, the undergraduate social work curriculum, delivered in the context of a liberal arts foundation, prepares students to practice using a structure that includes social and economic justice needed to enhance the quality of life for all persons, local and globally, with the hope of eliminating poverty. The values of the undergraduate social work program include: service, social justice, dignity and worth of the individual, importance of human relationships, integrity, and competence.
