THTRE 1060 Introduction to Musical Theatre

Catalog

2025-2026

Course Description

Introduction to Musical Theatre investigates musical theatre as a performing arts genre by incorporating historical explorations with listening, viewing, and performance activities in order to gain a greater appreciation for the art form. Critical and creative exploration of scenes, songs, styles, and artistic development of musical theatre comprise the course content. Each student develops and participates in individual and group projects presented for the class. Students will gain the foundational skills needed to read music and participate in musical performances at the collegiate level. This is a required course for musical theatre majors.

(Normally offered every fall semester.)
