Nebraska Wesleyan University

PSYCH 3940 Literature Spotlight: Social and Personality Psychology

Catalog

2026-2027

Course Description

This course will use collaborative project-based learning to serve as a bridge between introductory and upper-level research courses by helping students develop skills in reading, understanding, analyzing, and discussing empirical research in the social sciences. This course will include readings from a focused area of research within social or personality psychology, such as attitude change, interpersonal relationships, and person perception.

Prerequisite(s): PSYCH 2110 Research Methods in Psychology or another social science research methods course.

Course Hours

2 hours

Departments

1. Psychology